A Bungalow with a large Compound:

A bungalow with a large compound has a lot of space in terms of outdoor area. So naturally, so many activities which happen in a house in daily basis, can be distributed equally as outdoor activities.

Some of those activities are shown happening in a bungalow in detail. As the presentation progresses, the comparison between different types of housing will be shown.

Activities Happening in the compound:

- Sitting with family/ neighbours
- Gardening
- Playing
- Conducting functions/festival celebration
- Drying of food items and clothes
- Barbeque and lighting fire in the cold
- Sleeping
- Parking

A House without a Compound:

Just like an apartment, a bungalow without a compound also doesn't have as much outdoor space as a bungalow with a compound. So the activities happening may be restricted in the house as well.

So this type of housing may accommodate as many activities as it can in the spaces like verandah or back gallery.

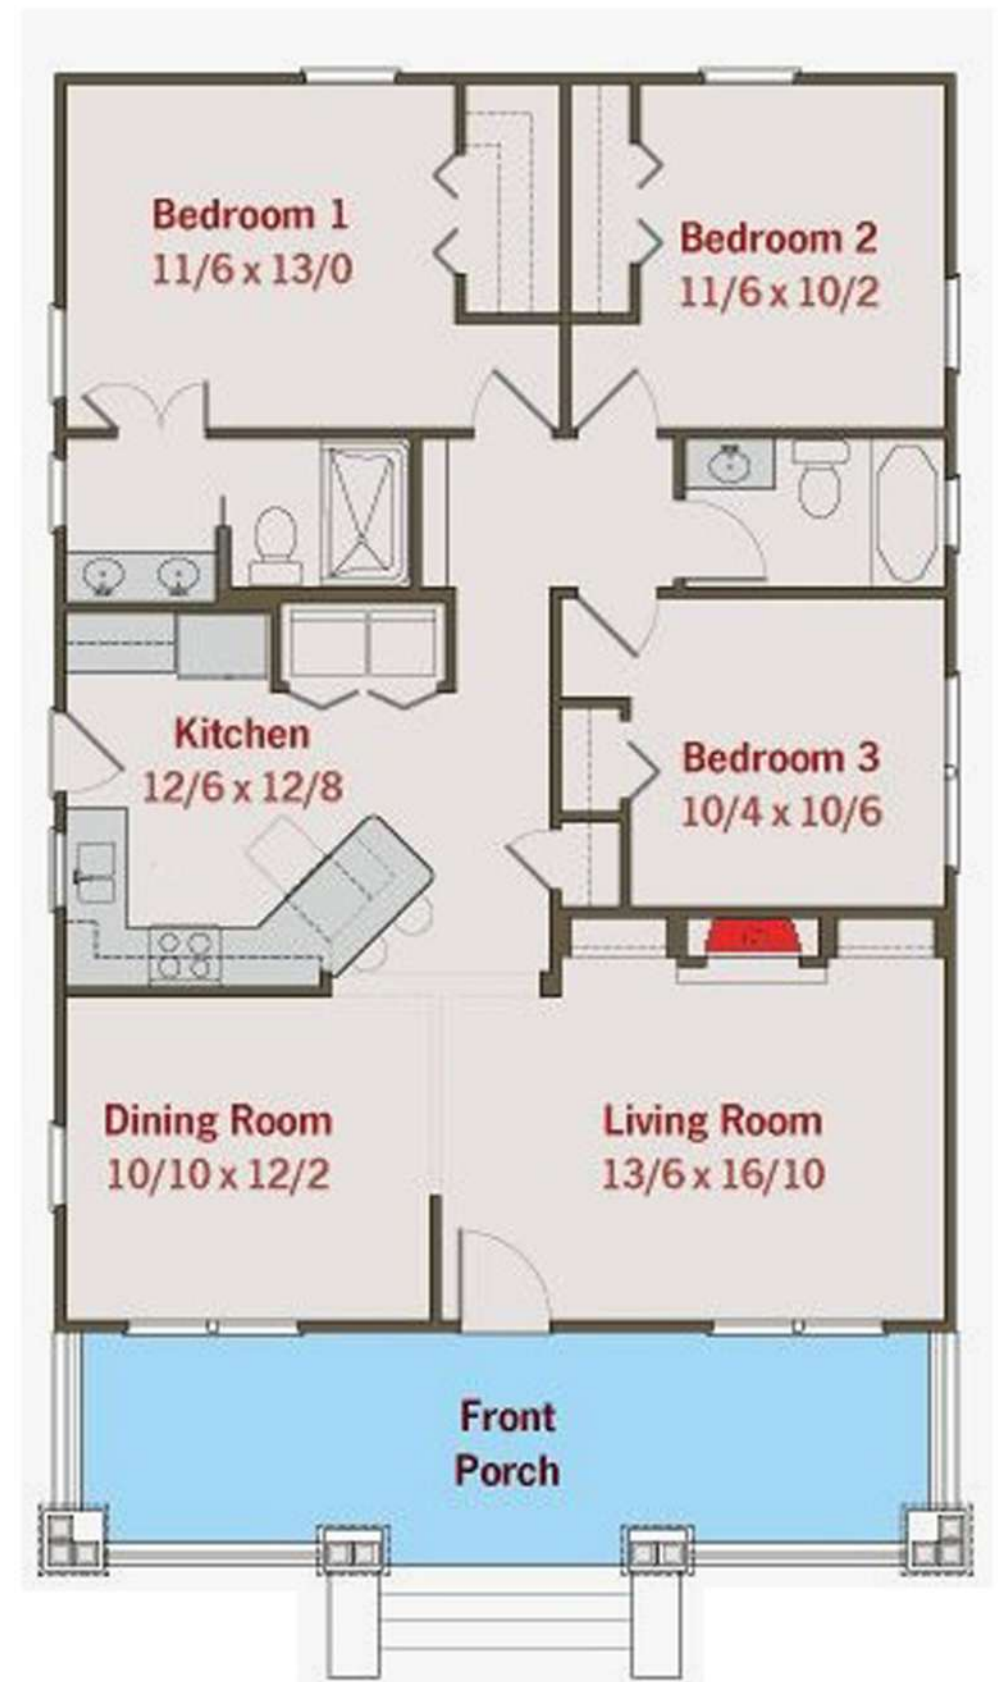

Some of those activities are shown happening in a bungalow without a compound.

Activities Happening in the bungalow:

- Sitting with family/ neighbours
- Gardening
- Playing
- Drying of food items and clothes
- Barbeque and lighting fire in the cold
- Sleeping
- Parking

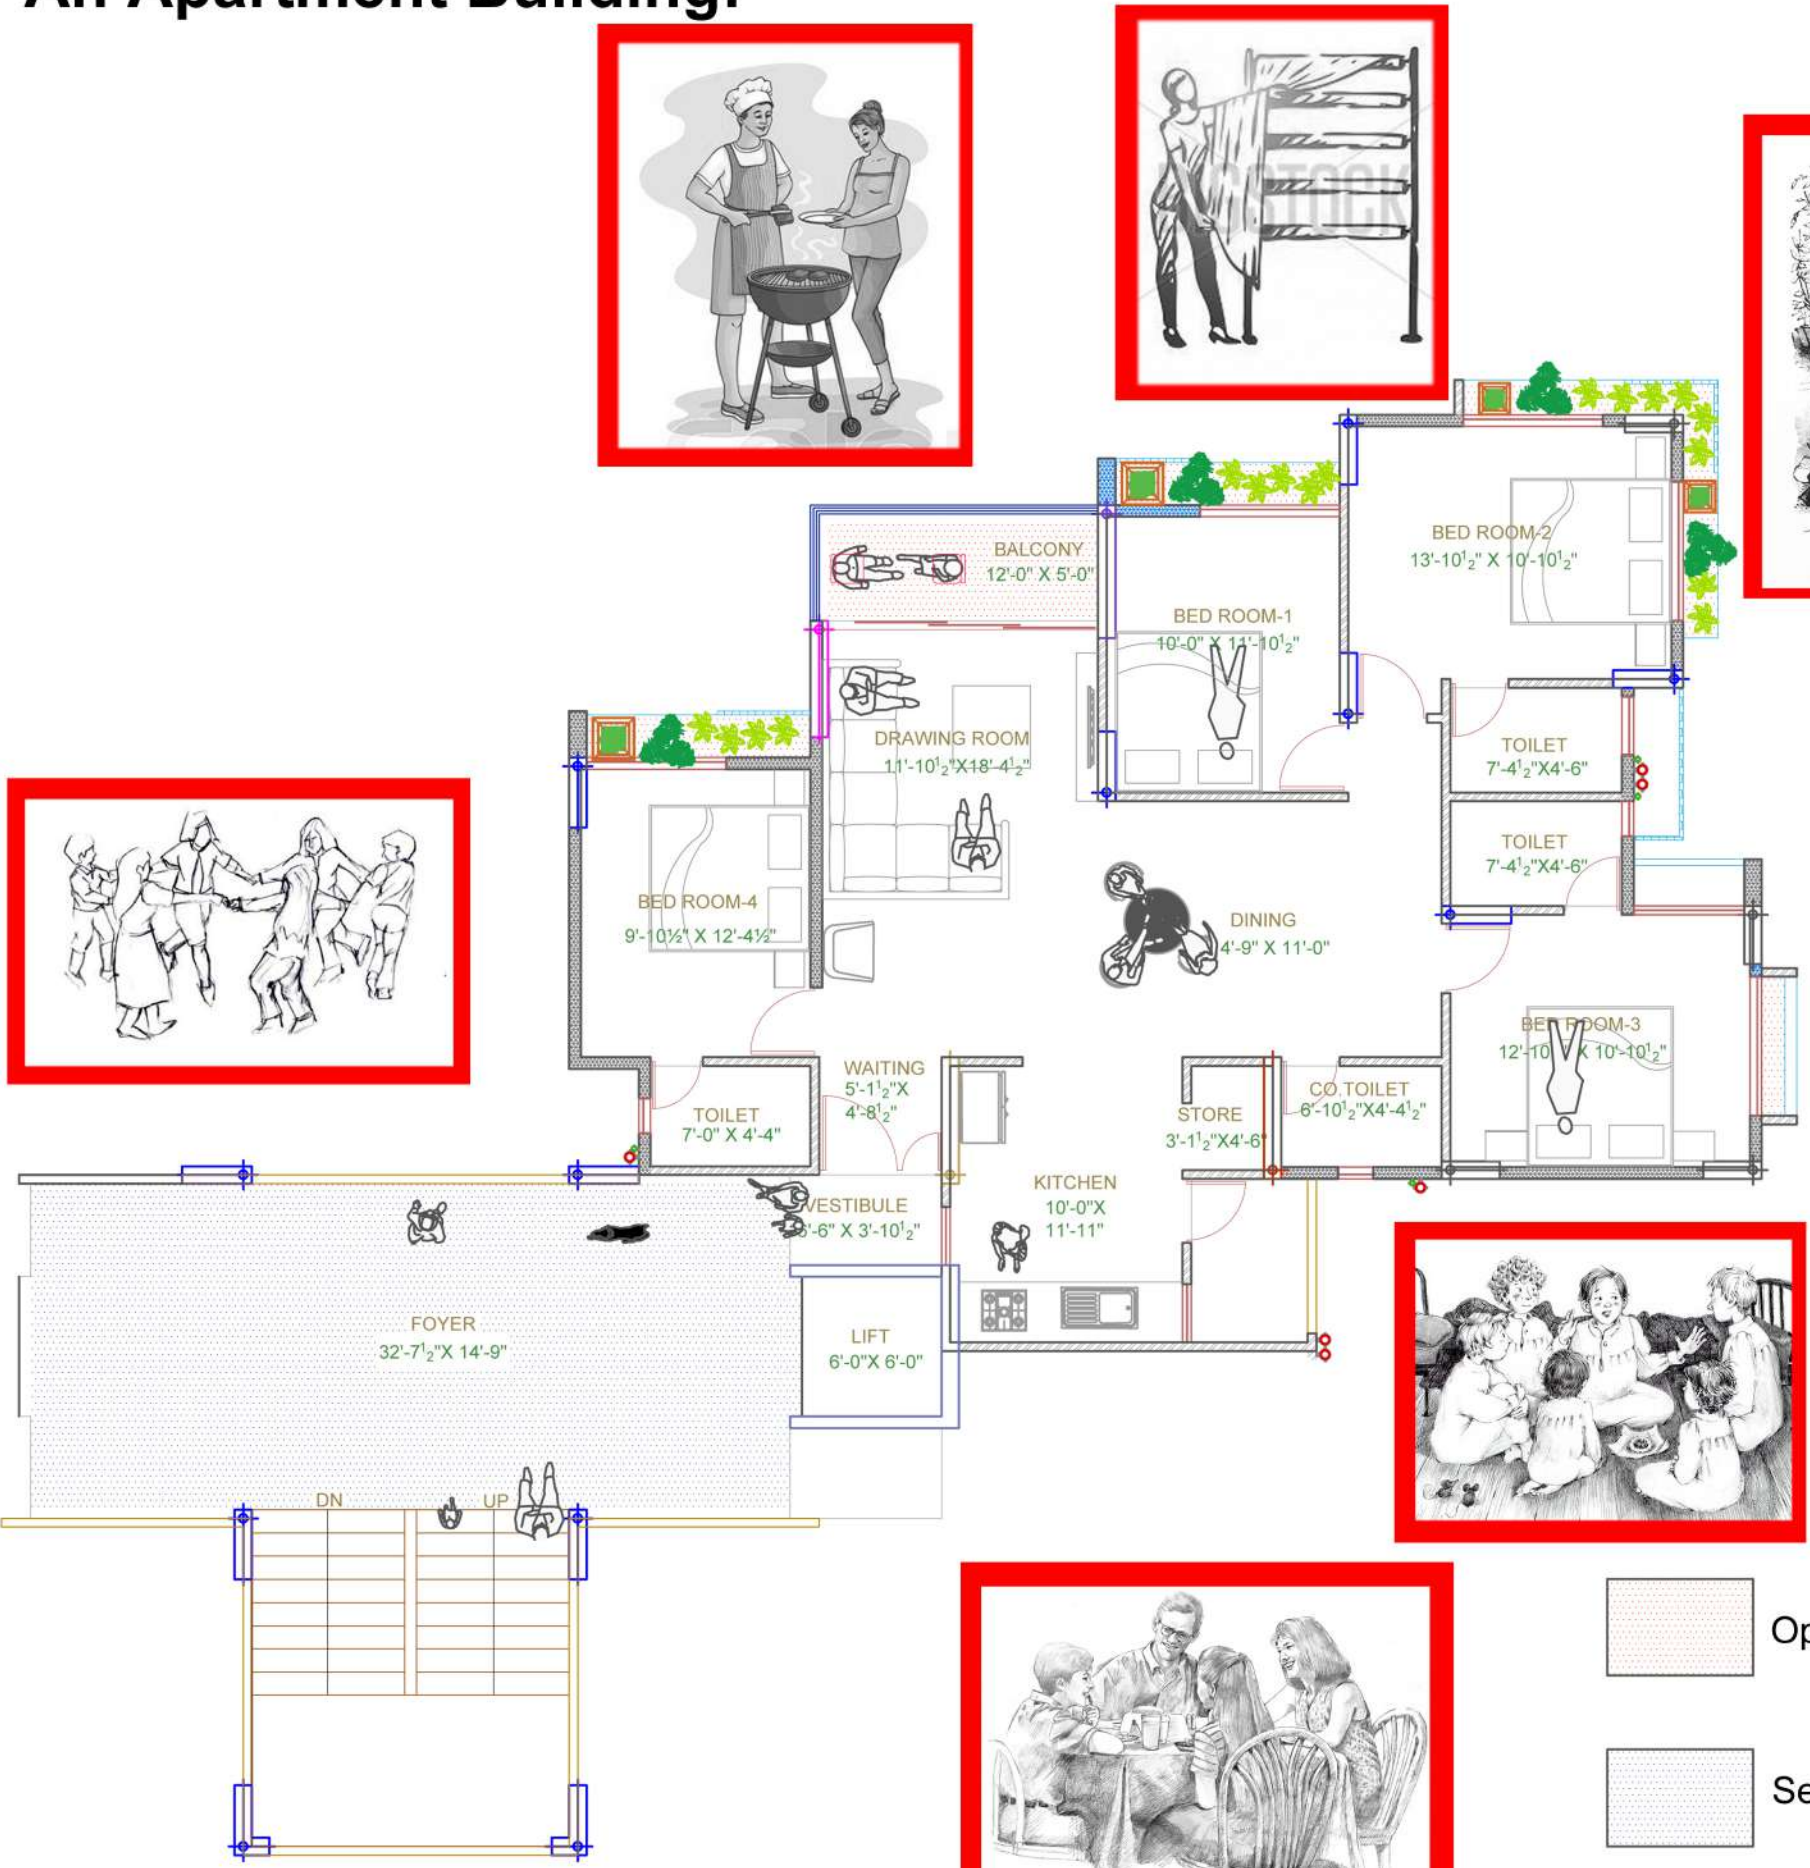

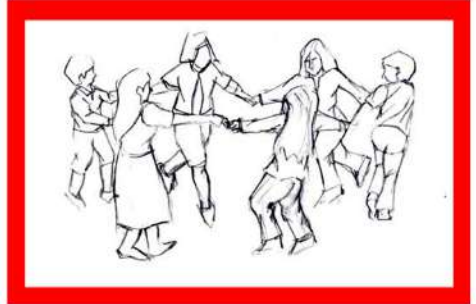

- Open Space
- Semi-open Space

An Apartment Building:

An apartment doesn't have as much outdoor space as a bungalow. So the activities happening may be restricted in the house.

But as an apartment has a common ground space for all the houses included, the shared space can also become a place where a lot of activities happen as a group, like children playing or people sitting together talking in the evening.

Some of those activities are shown happening in an apartment in detail.

Activities Happening inside the apartment:

- Sitting with family/ neighbours
- Gardening
- Playing
- Drying of food items and clothes
- Barbeque and lighting fire in the cold
- Sleeping

Activities Happening outside the apartment (common activities):

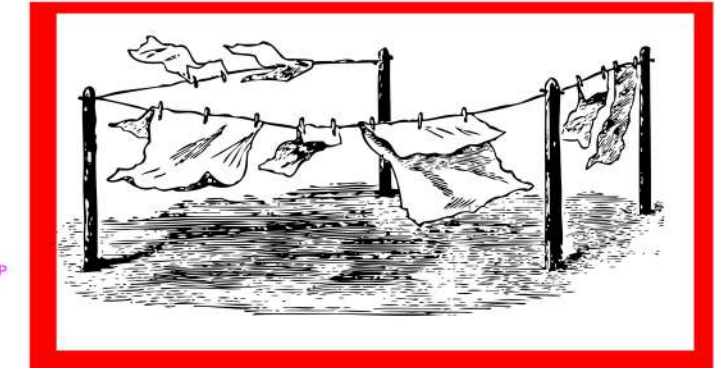

- Sitting with family/ neighbours
- Gardening
- Playing
- Parking
- Conducting functions/ celebrating festivals

A Pol House:

Open Space

Semi-open Space

In a pol house, the main space which is open or equivalent to a compound is basically a courtyard which is inside the house. So the main benefit of this is the activities are mostly privately happening and inside the house rather than outside of the building.

Some of those activities are shown happening in a pol house.
